GEN INSIGHTS: CONNECTING WITH YOUNG PROFESSIONALS & CHANGING LIVES

Integrating business, life & faith

Carlamay Sheremata is a retired police officer who resides in Calgary, Alberta. For the last 21 years, she has had extensive experience in school environments offering specialized training in adolescent development, along with extensive mental health training. Carlamay has been a part of numerous media interviews and has appeared on several television broadcasts. Drawing on her extensive experience in law enforcement, Carlamay brings a unique perspective. She focuses on the resilience and strength of individuals facing adversity.

Deeply passionate about the well-being of youth, Carlamay believes that young people today face significant challenges and are yearning to be heard. She advocates for giving young people a voice, recognizing their potential and the importance of listening to their experiences and perspectives. Her new book “Youth Truth: Engaging in Conversations That Can Change Lives” was recently launched and delves into the raw, unfiltered world of today’s youth, bringing to light the often overlooked and misunderstood battles they fight.

When she’s not writing, Carlamay enjoys singing, serving others, and cherishing time with her husband and son, along with other family and friends. She is dedicated to creating a lasting legacy through her work and personal life.
